

Online Time Recording

The flexible way to collect data on work scheduling: Software system AB-WorkingTime and Data Acquisition Terminal AB TT2.

Our special terminals support the decentralised configuration of AB-WorkingTime. Data is collected on our server and is available just a short time later.

Data collection on a PC thus is reduced to the input of holiday and sickness periods.

What is special about the data acquisition terminal?

Acquired data is transferred to our work schedule server via a mobile phone network. No complex assembly or configuration is necessary because of our data acquisition's mode of operation. No connection to local data networks, no cabling, no connection to a PC or printer – all you need is a plug. You are assured that time recording works reliably, even after modifications to your EDP landscape.

Then, you can call up data via convenient software from any PC that can be connected to the internet. All data collected on the terminal is recorded in log books for traceability.

In addition, staff can interactively retrieve relevant data from their working time account (plus and minus hours, for example) directly on the data acquisition terminal before starting work.
